I can't say I was shocked by the decision, but at least call it what it was...a boost to the economy.

The facts are:

1. Microsoft was convicted of breaking the law
2. Microsoft thumbed its nose at the industry during the penalty phase by embedding more products, and recently by even making there msn site unusable by mozilla and there takeover of qwest's ISP business will only support there proprietary POP3 protocol which will force people to use ... Microsoft's OS....

so,
call it what it is...politics.
